

Weekly Equity Trend 10 November 2025

NIFTY (25,492.30)

Weekly Technical View

The index continued its fall last week, starting on a muted note and making new weekly lows in almost all trading sessions. On the daily chart, the index has broken below its crucial 10 and 20 DEMA lines, indicating a shift in trend. The RSI has dropped significantly from 70 to below 50, signaling fading momentum. Nifty has now found support near the 50% Fibonacci retracement level of the previous upswing, placed at 25,318. On the weekly chart, while the broader trend remains positive, immediate momentum has turned negative. The index has seen intensified selling following the formation of two bearish inverted hammers on the weekly chart. The RSI shows a slight downward slope, indicating weakening momentum. It has found good support near the 10 DEMA line on the weekly timeframe. Maintaining the short-term WEMA will be crucial for Nifty to keep the broader trend positive. Currently, most data points indicate weakness. Immediate support is placed at 25,300, which coincides with the 50% retracement of the previous upswing, while resistance is seen at 25,600–25,650, near the short-term DEMA. The outlook remains cautious with a negative bias. Traders can sell Nifty near 25,600–25,650 for targets of 25,500–25,400–25,300. Any sustained move and close above 25,730 will warrant a review of the current view and should be taken as a stop-loss.

BANKNIFTY (57,876.80)

The index witnessed volatile price action last week. It started on a strong note, gaining more than 450 points in Monday's session; however, over the next three sessions, it fell by over 1,000 points. By the end of Friday's session, it rebounded sharply—surging more than 800 points from the lows—to close the week about 100 points higher. In the previous week's trading, Nifty formed a spinning top pattern, indicating indecision between bulls and bears. However, the earlier week's bearish inverted hammer and gravestone doji highlight selling pressure at higher levels. The index appears to be consolidating within a range on the weekly timeframe, though some initial signs of weakness have emerged on the daily chart. The index has fallen below its short-term DEMA lines, with the RSI sloping downward and forming lower highs and lower lows. The MACD has shown a negative crossover, and the index has been unable to sustain above the previous day's highs—all pointing to weakness. A decisive close below 57,350 would confirm a short-term reversal and could trigger a move toward 57,000. Immediate support is placed at 57,500–57,200, while resistance is seen at 58,240–58,500. The outlook remains cautious. Traders can sell Bank Nifty near 57,850 for targets of 57,500–57,200. Any sustained strength above 58,000 should act as a stop-loss, as it could trigger a rally toward 58,240–58,500.
