Technical Outlook

Nifty (24,435.95): Support at 20 SMA; Forms a hammer

Nifty 50 continued its decline in yesterday's session, facing strong selling pressure initially as it broke below the crucial 24,500 mark. However, the index witnessed buying interest in the second half and recovered to close well off the day's low.

Technically, the index found support near the 20 SMA and formed a hammer candlestick pattern, indicating buying interest at lower levels. The broader technical structure continues to remain bullish.

We maintain a positive bias, with 24,400-24,200 acting as the key demand zone. On the higher side, 24,700-24,800 remains the immediate hurdle, while a decisive breakout above 24,800 could trigger fresh buying interest.

Bank Nifty (57,885.85): Closes with a bullish candlestick.

Bank Nifty witnessed a strong close after three consecutive losing sessions, ending near the day's high and reflecting strong price action. Market breadth remained strongly positive, with 13 out of 14 stocks closing in the green.

Technically, the index formed a strong bullish candlestick in yesterday's session and once again found support near the 50 SMA. A decisive breakout above 58,000 could trigger a fresh rally towards 59,000.

However, a closing break below 57,000 would invalidate the bullish view and warrant a reassessment of the trend.
