Daily Commodity Trend

14 Aug 2026

MCX Gold (1,53,466): Forms a bearish candlestick.

MCX Gold ended its seven-day winning streak and formed a bearish candlestick, indicating some profit booking at higher levels. However, the price remains above the 10-DEMA and has recently broken out of a falling resistance line, which is likely to act as support. The positive momentum remains intact as long as the price sustains above the 10-DEMA, while 155,850 remains the immediate hurdle.

Intra-day support is placed at 151,450, while resistance is seen at 155,800, 158,600 and 160,700. The outlook for the day remains Positive, with sustained strength above 155,850 likely to trigger fresh upside momentum. The outlook will need to be reviewed if the price sustains below 150,000.

MCX Silver (2,35,447): Forms a bearish Harami; Daily momentum positive.

MCX Silver ended lower in yesterday's session and formed a small bearish candlestick, indicating a brief pause after the recent upmove. However, the rising DEMA lines indicate positive momentum, while the price remains above the key 10 and 20 DEMA levels. The current weakness is likely to be a breather before the next leg higher, with 242,000 acting as the immediate hurdle.

MCX Crude Oil (7,928): Lacks directional Baise.

MCX Crude Oil ended lower in yesterday's session and formed an indecisive candlestick, indicating a lack of clear directional bias. Volatility remains elevated, while the broader trend stays negative and daily momentum remains neutral. The sideways and volatile trend is likely to persist until a decisive breakout or breakdown emerges.

Intra-day support is placed at 7,400, while resistance is seen at 8,075 and 8,250. The outlook for the day remains Neutral, and traders are advised to maintain strict risk management amid elevated volatility. The outlook will need to be reviewed on sustained strength above 8,100 or sustained weakness below 7,345.
