Nifty Spot Chart

Technical Outlook

Despite the negative indication from the SGX Nifty; our benchmark indices opened on muted note. Post opening, index gradually descended lower however mammoth buying interest across the IT counters lifted the index higher. In the process, index ended another session near its opening tick. Looking at the hourly chart, the Bollinger band has contracted hence volatility in the near term likely to increase. Broadly speaking, 10600 / 10640 zone will act as a strong hurdle for index only a sustain move beyond this level will attract fresh buying interest. On the flip side, 10510 / 10450 are immediate support for index.

Bank Nifty Spot Chart

Technical Outlook

On Friday, the Nifty Bank index opened on flat note and remained under pressure during the first half. Subsequently, a mild recovery during the fag end of the session resulted into a close with a loss of 0.73%. During the day, index broke the immediate support of 24950 which coincided with the upward sloping trend line on hourly chart. The hourly RSI (14) broke the support level of 40 which do not augur well for bulls. For the day, 24800 / 24650 are near term support whereas resistance comes near 25090 / 25230 levels respectively.
