View

State Bank of India posted a steady Q3FY25 performance and stable asset quality as the challenging times in MFI and unsecurd lending remains a key highlight for the sector. Though the business growth remained a tad below expectations however management remains confident of achieving earlier guided 14-16% credit growth backed by strong pipeine of sanctioned loans. Management remains upbeat on MSME segment with revamped SME funding processes to drive advances growth and anticipates govt.'s announcements in union budget to be structurally supportive for the sector. Additionally, SBI's comfortable position on LDR front provides enough cushioning even if deposit mobilization remains soft in near term.

Multiple factors such as structural headwinds in terms of MFI and Unsecured lending related asset quality challenges, high cost of fund led NIM compressions and moderation in systemic credit growth have led to a significant underperformance of banking sector for past many quarters now, leading to valuation derating as well. SBI is the key beneficiary of an economic upcycle and would benefit out of government's focused efforts on accelerating the economic activity through capex pick-up and consumption revival. Given notable correction in SBI stock price and comfortable valuation of 1.2x P/Bk FY26e, we feel long term investors can BUY this stock at current levels.
