

Daily Commodity Trend

25th June 2026

MCX Gold (141,270): Big bearish Marubozu formation on daily timeframe.

MCX Gold extended its decline in the previous session and formed a large bearish Marubozu candlestick, highlighting strong selling pressure at higher levels. Fresh weakness below the prior two sessions' lows accelerated the downside move, while the prevailing lower-high lower-low formation continues to keep the short-term trend negative. Prices are now hovering near the crucial 200-DEMA support zone, a decisive breakdown of which could invite further selling pressure.

For the day, the outlook remains negative, with immediate resistance placed near 143,800, while support is seen in the 139,000-136,300 zone. Any pullback towards resistance is likely to attract fresh selling interest. The outlook will require a review only on a sustained close above 145,480, which could signal a weakening of the current bearish structure.

MCX Silver (213,075): Breaks below important technical support levels

MCX Silver witnessed strong selling pressure in the previous session and closed with a bearish candlestick formation. The metal has decisively broken below its 200-DEMA and a key trendline support, indicating a potential reversal in the broader trend. The lower-high lower-low formation remains intact on the daily chart, keeping both trend and momentum firmly on the bearish side.

For the day, the outlook remains negative, with immediate resistance placed near 219,550 and support seen around 199,650. Any recovery towards higher levels is likely to attract fresh selling interest as long as the prevailing bearish structure remains intact. The outlook will require a review only on a sustained move above 227,150, which could negate the current weakness and improve the technical setup.

MCX Zinc (353.70): Trend reversal on daily chart.

MCX Zinc extended its weakness in the previous session and formed a large bearish Marubozu candlestick, reflecting strong selling pressure. Over the past few weeks, the metal has witnessed a bearish Head and Shoulders breakdown on the daily chart, signaling a potential reversal of the earlier uptrend. The negative crossover in short-term DEMA lines along with an RSI divergence breakdown further strengthens the bearish outlook.

For the day, the outlook remains negative, with immediate resistance placed near 358, while support is seen in the 348-338 zone. Any pullback towards resistance is likely to attract fresh selling interest as the short-term trend remains weak. The outlook will require a review only on a sustained move above 365, which could negate the current bearish setup and improve sentiment.
