MCX Gold (1,63,229): Near first major resistance zone.

MCX Gold extended its positive streak for the fourth consecutive session, continuing the strong rally following the falling resistance trendline breakout. The daily trend remains positive with bulls in control, although the metal has now entered its first major resistance zone and witnessed some supply near the initial hurdle. Partial profit booking followed by trailing the remaining positions is advisable.

For the day, the outlook remains positive, with support at 159,600 and resistance at 164,750–169,880. Sustained buying could extend the rally towards the higher resistance zone, while traders may consider booking partial profits near these levels and trailing the remaining positions. The outlook will require a review on sustained weakness below 157,000.

MCX Silver (2,44,220): witness selling in yesterday's session.

MCX Silver ended negative in the previous session, snapping its three-session winning streak and forming a bearish candlestick with a hammer-like structure. Some consolidation or a pullback cannot be ruled out in the coming sessions; however, the daily trend remains firmly positive, with the 10 DEMA likely to provide near-term support. Dips towards the 10 and 20 DEMA lines could offer favourable risk-reward opportunities to accumulate longs.

For the day, the outlook remains positive, with support at 239,250 and resistance at 252,500–254,200. The outlook will require a review on sustained weakness below 237,200, while dips towards the short-term DEMA supports can be considered opportunities to add longs for higher targets.

MCX Crude Oil (8,135): Resistance near the falling resistance trendline.

MCX Crude Oil ended the previous session on a negative note, forming a bearish candlestick as the falling resistance trendline continued to cap the upside. The recent price action indicates some weakness, with the commodity likely to test lower support levels in the coming sessions. Volatility is expected to remain elevated on both sides, warranting a disciplined risk-management approach.

For the day, the outlook remains neutral, with support at 7,950 and resistance at 8,350. Sustained strength above 8,450 could trigger fresh buying and improve the short-term structure, while sustained weakness below 7,950 would warrant a review and could invite further selling pressure.
